

Palace of Rock

9/12/15, Kaj Roth

URL: <http://rothnroll.blogspot.com/search?q=Nervous+Germans>

Nervous Germans - From Prussia With Love (2015) More than meets the eye

I really didn't know what to think of Nervous Germans when I looked at the album cover of their 2nd album "From prussia with love", I mean you see a guy with a flying V guitar looking like he could be a member of The Scorpions. The guy next to him looks just like a science teacher and then you have the 3rd guy that is Mr.Cool, he's looking at you and saying -Wanna hear some Paul Carrack songs?

And on the right, a woman that just don't belong in the photo. She might as well could've visited the studio that day to deliver coffee and cookies for her husband in the band.

Now with that introduction, this album doesn't start out like the best choice to pick for the music in your headphones today. However, that's where the smoke clears and you'll get a much clearer picture once the music starts.

Nervous Germans hails from Berlin, an international city where the music scene has made quite an impact in Europe with bands like Rammstein, Nina Hagen, Tangerine Dream and Cinema Bizarre. This quartet released their debut "Volatile" in 2014 but my first meeting with the band is the new album "From prussia with love", the production sounds like it could've been handled by Jeff Lynne but the music has more in common with Chris De Burgh and The Outfield, and even elements of Matthew Good.

Timeless classic rock so to speak and I like it.